AbilityNet Accredited

Nigel Lewis
Chief Executive Officer

An 'AbilityNet Accredited' website has been tested by users with a diverse range of disabilities, and has undergone expert evaluation to ensure that good accessibility practice has been followed.

AbilityNet accessibility testing is undertaken by a broad network of genuinely representative disabled consumers who can provide an authentic account of the key issues they encounter.

Any issues identified during the review procedure have been subsequently resolved to provide 'real-life accessibility'.

This accreditation covers the core functionality only of the Victim Support website. The core functionality covers among others, the following pages/content of the website:

- Home Page
- Job Ad Page
- Feedback About Our Service
- People we've helped
- Victim Support PDF document

Websites are subject to change as updates and improvements are released. However, websites displaying this trust mark have committed to best practice in maintaining the highest levels of accessibility and usability after certification.

This certificate is valid for 12 months from the date of issue when the site was tested. Report a suspected misuse of this trust mark to accessibility@abilitynet.org.uk.

AbilityNet is a national charity specialising in ICT accessibility and usability, providing a wide range of services, including the development and implementation of corporate accessibility standards as well as disabled user testing and support for individuals through assessment and training.
